Outwood Academy Hemsworth has provided a wealth of evidence to show it is fulfilling the criteria associated with the Gold level award. The progress made from the start of the programme to this point is exemplary and the lead staff are rightly proud of their school. The work they have been doing is also being shared on an academy-wide, region-wide and national arena.

Key points to celebrate include comprehensive training focusing on supporting the mental health and well-being of the pupils, including training on how adversity impacts on brain development and behaviour. This is of particular relevance at the moment whilst we are in the grip of the COVID-19 pandemic. Support for staff, pupils and families has been relentless during the pandemic, and this has been recognised in pupil, parent and staff questionnaires.

Workload has been addressed and reduced, such as marking and assessment – this has happened as a result of measures such as disaggregating the three INSET days and using directed time for marking rather than expecting it to be done in teachers' own time. Staff questionnaires show that this has been appreciated and recognised as a positive measure to support them.

The overhauling of the leadership team and the inclusion of a named mental health and well-being lead has allowed the focus to remain high across the whole school. The implementation of the Deep Support Team has had a very positive impact on the mental health and well-being of adults and pupils in school, with non-teaching staff dedicated to providing support for those pupils deemed as vulnerable or needing further care. The presence of a full-time member of West Yorkshire Police in the school ensures that pupils are able to build positive relationships with the police and can receive education about such issues as County Lines.

The school are in the second year of working with a team of Mental Health Champions. This supports pupils through signposting, events, and teaching. Support for staff comes from a comprehensive well-being programme with guidance and training around managing their own mental health. Counselling and coaching are available through trained teachers, and the return to school after the COVID-19 closure was accompanied by training via BUPA and the Carnegie Centre for Excellence in Mental Health in Schools.

Hemsworth is working in the national arena to develop good practice, and of particular note is the involvement of the school in the YoungMinds Teacher Insight Group, a national forum for discussing and disseminating ideas and strategies that work.

Areas to continue to develop include the impetus to ensure there are Mental Health First Aiders for adults, training for which was postponed due to COVID-19. There is work to be done with the governing body in terms of how they can support the new Mental Health Lead, and another identified aim is to ensure parents and families are more closely involved with the school in their community outreach work.

I have no hesitation in recommending Outwood Hemsworth for the Gold level award.
